A workshop exploring the implications of human classification across a range of different domains—science, social behavior, education, literature, and the arts.

10:30 - 10:45 Jesse Prinz, Philosophy, “Introduction”
10:45-11:15 Rachel Kravetz, English, "J.G. Frazer and the Grotesque"
11:30-12:00 Rochelle Rives, English, "Criminal Types: Joseph Conrad and the Sciences of Detection."
12:00-12:30 Andreas Killen, History, "Sciences of Expression in Weimar Germany"
1:45-2:15 Ken Guest, Anthropology, “Challenging Biological Essentialism in the Anthropology Classroom”
2:15-2:45 Christina Nadler, Sociology, "Categories & Care: Social Distinctions w/ Material Consequences"
3:00-3:30 Tiwi Marira, Industrial / Organizational Psychology, "Colorism and Classism: Exploring New Antecedents and Old Consequences"
3:30-4:00 Julie Maybee, Philosophy and Disability Studies, "Impairment and Biology"
4:00-5:00 Reception

May 15, 2015, 10:30am-5:00pm, Room 5307
Sponsored by the Committee for Interdisciplinary Science Studies